

I find that XM radio is less offensive and gives poeple what they want to hear when they want it. I find the Daily shows on Morning radio strictly poor taste and teenage sex humor. How can the FCC say they are trying to "protect" the general public when they attack XM radio and allow the morning "zoo" radio. The audience listening and paying for the XM service are aware of what they are listening. It is much easier to protect the youth from profanity when you do not have a DJ trying to shock the listeners and get the ratings. XM gives striaght radio and an impressive selection of radio. Instead of attacking XM radio, why don't the Radio stations just play music, and try to beat them fairly by playing less commercials and leaving out the less than creative shock DJs. XM radio makes my hour ride to work much more enjoyable. I travel often and the weather and traffic reports are extremely important to my commute. The instant traffic reports make it easy for me to keep my friends up to date on jams.
